LYCEUM EXPERIENCES.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton Tells About the Pleasures of Lecturing.

Flying from Point to Point—Repacking the Platform Dress—A Midnight Lecture on the Mississippi—The Autograph Affliction.

Our American system of lyceum bureaus and lecturing has been truly remarkable, both for its thoroughness and stability. Having decided to enter that profession, you choose your bureau, which at once gets out a lithograph of you, collects all the puffs you have ever had, and puts both in a pamphlet, with others of the fraternity, which is sent broadcast through the land. Having secured a list of engagements the bureau writes out your appointments with exact directions how to go, dates, railroad time, etc., which are studied up with wonderful accuracy.

As you pay the bureau ten per cent. of what you make it is their interest to see that you speak every evening, if possible. To this end you travel night and day. Neither the bureau that employs you nor the committee that engages you have the slightest interest in your eating, sleeping or resting, so that you step on the platform at the appointed hour, fresh and smiling, charged with enough magnetism to hold the audience. You speak from one to two hours, shake hands with friends for half an hour, then hurry to your hotel, don your traveling attire, repack your platform dress, then chat with friends until it is time for the midnight train, and start for the next point, where you may arrive just in time for the evening performance.

You are not always sure of a sleeping car by any means. Oftimes in waiting for a train at some cross road you may sit at a station until the small hours of morning, and then take the caboose on a freight train at last.

Eight months of such fatigue, with all the social festivities, dinners, suppers, receptions and the extra speaking in schools, colleges, prisons, charitable institutions, and sometimes twice on Sundays, together make a severe strain on any ordinary constitution.

The Bureaus used to say there were no more enduring, persevering lecturers than Anna E. Dickinson, Mary A. Livermore, Susan B. Anthony and myself; none that through the entire season so promptly fulfilled all engagements; none that braved the summer's heat, the wintry blasts, the spring and autumn floods with more heroic equinimity. Traveling from Maine to Texas for nearly twenty years, what trials and hardships, what varied, amusing experiences all of us could give!

I remember one cold winter night crossing the Mississippi to McGregor, in Iowa. Our boat, crowded with a whole train of railroad passengers, was blocked with ice midway, and there she stood for hours. The people, crowded and uncomfortable, stood also, tired, sleepy, hungry, cross, children crying, women complaining, men uttering ever and anon most emphatic expletives. In the midst of the general hubbub a delegation of gentlemen invited me to entertain the passengers with a speech on woman suffrage, as there were some southern gentlemen on board who desired to discuss the question with me. Always benevolently inclined to enlighten my countrymen on this subject, I readily consented. The boat was called to order, and there, at midnight, in the middle of the Mississippi, after I had fairly presented the question, we held a lively discussion.

It is said that there are no people so good-natured under trying circumstances as the Americans, and the experience of that night proved the truth of the assertion. Our condition was, indeed, exasperating; but there we all stood, laughing, talking, debating the fundamental principles of Republican government, with frozen feet and empty stomachs, for three mortal hours.

The children, one by one, had dropped to sleep; the women, in contemplating their civil and political grievances, forgot their surroundings; and the men, in viewing the faithful pictures of their tyranny and oppression, felt, no doubt, that a brief imprisonment in the bosom of the Great Father of Waters was no more than they deserved.

That was a winter of heavy snow storms in the west, and the railroads were oftimes blockaded. Having an engagement at Maquoketa, Iowa, I stopped at Lyons to take a northern road. Arriving at noon, I found there was no train running.

"How far is it to Maquoketa?" I inquired.

"Forty miles," said the landlord.

"How long would it take to drive there across the country?" I asked.

"Between seven and eight hours," he replied.

"How are the roads?"

"Almost impassable," cried half a dozen men, listening to our conversation.

But accustomed to magnificent snow drifts in my young days I was not easily frightened. So I inquired if I could get a comfortable sleigh, a span of good horses and a brave driver.

"Oh, yes, madam," was the prompt reply; but you could not stand the fatigue of the journey, and it is bitter cold and the wind will go through you like needles."

"I will risk myself if you can give me a fair outfit."

"I can give you the best driver and horses in the State," said he, "and will try and make you comfortable, if you are determined to start, but I have my doubts about your getting there."

After a hasty dinner the sleigh was at the door, with a hot oak board for my feet; so, donning a fur sack and a nat hood over my bonnet, I stepped into the sleigh, where I was encased in two large buffalo robes, the tails tied on either shoulder, effectually barring every entrance to the wind. I was so securely nudged in that moving, or winking even, seemed impracticable.

"There," said the landlord, giving the finishing touches, "if you will sit perfectly still you will come out at Maquoketa, if you ever get there, as warm as you start."

The driver in front, well clad, cracked his whip and we were off. We had gone six miles when we met some empty lumber sleds returning from a neighboring town.

"How are the roads ahead?" said the driver.

"Impassable," they replied.

"Then, how did you get through?" said I.

"With difficulty, madam."

"Well," said I to the driver, "let us go on until we find them impassable. If these men went through with loads, we surely can with none at all," for I had left my baggage at Lyons, there not being room in the sleigh. And so we went on and on, making six miles an hour, although all the travelers we met told us the roads were impassable.

I had telegraphed from Lyons that I should reach Maquokets at eight o'clock driving across the country, but although the committee there thought I could not reach them, they had the hall warm and agreed to notify the audience by ringing the bell.

As the clock struck 8 we drove into the town, and I alighted at the door of the hall. After some gentlemen had untied the various knots that held me in position, the driver and all laughing heartily over my disinterment, I fulfilled the landlord's prophecy and came forth as warm as I started. I went into a house next door, gave a few touches to my toilet, but did not stop to eat or rest until my appointed work was finished. The reader can readily imagine with what zest I enjoyed my supper and night's rest after a drive of eight hours, a speech of two, a half hour of hand shaking and pleasant chatting at the fireside until midnight.

An early start and a long drive the next day for another appointment was a hard experience, and did not grow less fatiguing continued through two stormy weeks of extremely cold weather. And in all that time I never caught a glimpse of my portmanteau. While the laundress performed her subtle arts on my meagre wardrobe, I betook myself to the land of dreams.

Spending a few days at the Sherman House, in Chicago, after these severe experiences, I met there Charles Bradlaugh and Gen. Kilpatrick, who had also been lecturing under difficulties.

"Well," said the General, "how many appointments have you lost in these deep snows?"

"Not one," said I.

"Is that possible?" he replied. "Why, we have lost two entire weeks in Iowa. The roads were blocked at various points, and traveling was out of the question. How did you manage?"

"Why," I replied, "I took a sleigh from point to point across the country," making my expedition appear as easy as possible, in order to ridicule the General; that while he was lecturing on "Sherman's March to the Sea" he had not the practical genius to march through a few snowdrifts in Ohio.

One of the great pleasures in those trips was occasionally meeting our fellow-sufferers at a quiet hotel in some of the western cities. What jovial times we had comparing our experiences, night seeing, going to operas, concerts, and theatres together. No one ever thoroughly appreciates the pleasure of sitting in an audience and being amused, until he has first had the whole responsibility of entertaining an audience for one or two hours himself. But those pleasures were rare. It was remarkable how seldom we met. Like ships at sea we passed each other to and fro on the boundless prairies. Now, perchance, one might catch a glimpse of Wendell Phillips, Schuyler Colfax, or Theodore Tilton, or some leisure evening listen to the vivid descriptions of old New England days, of Christmas and Thanksgiving, of courtships and sleighrides all in rhyme, by John G. Saxe, or one might enjoy a few hours on the train with Anna Dickinson or Frederick Douglass, the latter all dressed in fur cap and coat, robe in hand, looking as if he were ready for an expedition to the North pole. He was lecturing on "William the Silent," and some of his friends said he might as well be silent, as none of his old-time fervor was ever roused by that lecture.

It was amusing, too, at the various points to look at the autograph books wherein the army of lecturers, readers and singers inscribed their names and sentiments. A few did indulge in some variety, but Schuyler Colfax was ever true to this stanza:

"Count that day lost
Whose low descending sun
Views from thy hand
No worthy action done."

I rallied him once on the steadfastness of his quotation. "Alas!" said he, "any change would involve thought, and I am too tired on these trips to exercise an extra muscle of mind or body."

Most of my fellow-travelers regarded these autograph books as never-ending bores, but as I made them a medium of communication for all my heresies I felt that I did a great missionary work in inscribing on these gaily decorated and gilded pages some of the following sentiments:

"Man and woman a simultaneous creation. Genesis 1, 27th and 28th."

"The masculine and feminine elements are equal in the Godhead."

"We have proved it possible to have a state without a king, a church without a pope, a currency without a gold basis and a family without a divinely ordained head."

I congratulate myself that these assertions and many others equally suggestive, have impressed even the autograph books into the service of our beneficent reform movements. Some of the others struck more lofty keys.

"Give me liberty or give me death." FREDERICK DOUGLASS.

"The world belongs to those who take it." ANNA E. DICKINSON.

"I am a citizen of the United States and demand the right to vote." SUSAN B. ANTHONY.

"Character is destiny." MARY A. LIVERMORE.

But enough to show what inspiring thoughts can be breathed into the ears of our young people through their autograph books.

(Cloverdale (Cal.) Letter.]

The perpetrators of the stage robberies in this vicinity have been discovered in the persons of two young men, less than twenty years of age, who embarked in the business lately in the surprised with the intention of living well in the large cities of the country during the winter. They are strangers here, one of them, Billy Corbett, claiming to live in San Francisco, and the other, John Dwyer, hailing from the East. When the Wells-Fargo men overhauled

THE announcement of Mr. Duck's appointment to the office of Minister of Finance and Agriculture is made in this week's official Gazette.

THE State Legislature of Massachusetts has adopted the biennial sessions resolution thus falling into line with a dozen other important States on the same question.

AT OTTAWA recently a saloon keeper holding a Dominion license only was fined $20 and costs for selling liquor without a license. Dealers in liquor in this Province should keep on the safe side.

A morning contemporary states that, an evening contemporary chronicles events concerning certain disreputable people. To some extent that is true, as we have had occassion to take that same morning contemporary to task for many of its inconsistencies.

A telegram from Quebec says that at Matane, below Rimouski, a cannibal named Portias literally tore the body of his wife to pieces with his nails and teeth and then fled. He is a brother of the Portias, who, a few years ago, cut up his children to bait fox traps.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL GARLAND and Secretary of War Endicott, of President Cleveland's cabinet, are both teetotalers. The former says he became so because, on entering the cemetery one day, he read there the names of so many of his schoolfellows who had died prematurely through excessive drinking.

THE number of customs seizures made at the port of Victoria during the fiscal year ending 30th of June last, were five, and the amount of fines imposed, $260. In the following six months ending 31st December last, there were three seizures and fines amounting to $216.57. During the first term mentioned there were 680 seizures in the whole Dominion, on which $87,242.97 fines were imposed; and in the last six months, 410 seizures and $64,659.87, fines.

IN Ontario some fears are expressed that a Fenian raid may be attempted while the troops are absent in the Northwest. The Globe says when all necessary troops have departed enough are left to take care of any Fenians, and all Fenian braggarts may take notice of the present temper of the Canadian people. It will go hard with any one caught perpetrating an outrage of any kind. Public sentiment, either in Toronto or at Ottawa, is too intense to permit any foolish demonstrations.

IT is just thirty-one years since the "New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Company"—which undertook the laying of the Atlantic cable—was organized in the dining-room of the present residence of Cyrus W. Field. What an advance has been made in telegraphy since that day—the life of a generation. To-day we converse with every prominent point on the face of the civilized globe, and the laying of a submarine cable is little more than the stretching of a clothes-line in the back-yard.

THE Colonist does not explain the omission of any reference in its "special commissioner's" report on the railway to the exorbitant freight rates which are sapping the life-blood of the business men. We did not expect that it would. Between a mercenary newspaper manager and a soulless railway corporation, there is a "fellow feeling that makes them wondrous kind" to each other. The people on the line of railway thoroughly understand and unanimously condemn the Colonist's cowardice. They know that that journal is not independent and dare not be just.

MR. H. W. GORDON has addressed the following letter to the Times: Miss Gordon has called my attention to the fact that I have not expressed my gratitude to the press generally, not only for the very handsome encomiums they have passed upon Gen. Gordon's memory and character, but also for the way they have put party politics on one aside supported him personally during the terrible ordeal he was undergoing at Khartoum. I now beg to return the sincere and true thanks of my family and myself for the kind and almost affectionate sympathy shown by the press and their truly gallant correspondents with the army towards General Gordon. I hope the press will pardon my not addressing each journal, which I find it impossible to do.

NORTHWEST REBELLION.

A portion of the Eastern press ridicules the half-breed rebellion at Prince Albert, and broadly asserts that most of the reports telegraphed to the press are manufactured to order in St. Paul. The grit papers magnify the rebellion—the Government organs pooh-pooh it as a very trifling affair. But the fact that three regiments of volunteers have left Toronto for the scene, necessitating a journey of over two thousand miles, and that several other bodies of the citizen soldiery, even in far-off Halifax, have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness, is the best evidence that the Government at least have serious apprehensions as to the ultimate extent and consequences of the uprising. We are now told, for the first time, that these half-breed rebels have been pressing their "claims" upon the Government for a long time, and it is because these "claims" have not been recognized that they have taken up arms to vindicate their "rights." What those demands are has not been stated. They are very probably of a vague and indefinite character and put forward solely with a view of extorting money from the Government. A second mistake in that direction will not be made by the Dominion Premier, who, though strong in the affections of the people, and with a powerful majority at his back, dare not again outrage public sentiment by compounding treason against the state which he has sworn to defend.

The locality where the uprising has occurred is described by Mr. Thos. A. Spink, of Toronto, who was the publisher of a paper at Prince Albert and only left there last Christmas. He says: "Prince Albert is situated on the north Saskatchewan river, in about the middle of the territory, and about 250 miles north of the line of the C. P. R. The total population of the place is about 1000 and this is composed of nearly all whites, store-keepers, traders, government officials, and Hudson Bay Company officers. These people have no arms to speak of, and if the half-breeds do rise in rebellion, all I can say is that it will go hard with the whites in Prince Albert. Carleton, which is fifty miles southwest of Prince Albert, also on the north Saskatchewan, is a very old Hudson Bay Company trading post, having been established many years ago. It is the oldest settlement in the territory, but its population consists of only the mounted police quartered there about eleven months ago, when Riel first arrived in the vicinity. The whites residing in Prince Albert will be in a bad fix if an outbreak occurs, for in the district of Lorne, in which the place is situated, there are about six thousand half-breeds who would do anything if led on by Riel. I rather think that the half-breeds are trying to frighten the Government into making better terms with them."

Big Bear, who, according to the latest despatches, is located near Riel's headquarters, and who stoutly refuses to go to his reserve, is one of the most troublesome of Cree chiefs in the Northwest. He was the last to take treaty, and when at length he had been induced to do so, in the autumn of 1882, the news was the sensation of the day with the mounted police, as well as among the officials of the Indian Department, throughout the whole of the territory. Even when such a truculent chief as Piapot was endeavoring to make satisfactory terms with the Indian Department in the summer of 1882, Big Bear remained south of the line hunting buffalo. It may also be interesting to note the fact that Louis Riel was at that very time also hunting buffalo in the vicinity of Judith Basin, Montana, and a not infrequent visitor at Big Bear's camp. It was this same Big Bear who some few years ago made trouble on the south Saskatchewan, and caused Colonel Irvine and a detachment of his men to take a tedious and perilous journey during the most intensely cold weather. Though probably less influential than Crowfoot, Poundmaker or Piapot, Big Bear wields a great deal of influence over the more restless and dissatisfied of his race, and taking this and his turbulent disposition into account, it is easy to understand why he should be regarded as the most dangerous Indian in the Northwest.

GREATER BRITAIN.

We observe a disposition among a certain class of Canadian newspaper writers to sneer at the effervescing loyalty which recently found expression in offers of assistance to the mother country. Even the voyageurs who braved the dangers of the Nile, are subjected to ridicule upon their return home, and are in effect told that they were a hindrance rather than a help to the army under Wolseley. Apart from the veiled treason boinced by the these writers to the empire, there is a lack of national sentiment and an absence of faith in the military powess of our people, that might better be left to aliens to the country or subjects of a foreign state. The loyalty of the colonies to the Home Government was never stronger than it is to-day and the necessity for a closer allegiance, a unification and consolidation of the mighty empire—was probably never more apparent than now, when danger to the parent state is most imminent. As colonists we cannot expect to be for ever exempt from the responsibilities of citizenship, and it is an encouraging sign of the growth of a feeling that will some day result in the accomplishment of federation—visionary though it may now appear to many—to find the descendants of the Anglo-Saxon race, in Australia and Canada, voluntarily offering their services to preserve the integrity of the empire. There are no annexationists in Canada, and on one's fingers can be counted those of any prominence who lean towards independence. The mass of the people are enthusiastically British in sentiment, and instead of attempting to sever the ties that now bind them to the old land, they are drawing them closer and making them more enduring whenever opportunity offers.

In New South Wales, from the moment the colony's offer was accepted until the departure of the contingent, the greatest enthusiasm was manifested. There were six times the number of volunteers required, while contributions in money and kind were made in the most lavish manner. When embarking, the contingent was escorted by 600 men and sailors from the men-of-war in port, and accompanied by the governor, the ministers and principal officials of the colony. The feeling thus spontaneously given expression to, in these two distant colonies, will have a powerful influence in binding together, in indissolvable ties, the common interest of the nation to which we are all proud to owe allegiance.

GENERAL NEWS.

Brief Items of Interest From Various Sources.

Mr. Gandet, M. P., fell and broke his leg on his way home at Ottawa.

The Devenport dockyard officials inform the Admiralty that they can have ten men-of-war ready for service in a fortnight.

The attention of Parliament will be called to a cartoon in United Ireland representing Earl Spencer on his death bed.

A number of test actions for the recovery of the double calls on stock of the Exchange Bank have been commenced by the liquidators.

The Belleville Milk Company were fined for selling milk in bottles containing short measure, and their stock of bottles, seven hundred in number, were confiscated.

A company has been formed to run a rapid transit railway round the Island of Montreal. An Act of incorporation is to be immediately applied for. The shareholders comprise all the leading capitalists of that city.

At the annual meeting of the Home for Incurables in Toronto, the urgent necessity of erecting an additional wing for cancer and consumptive patients, to cost $16,000, was shown, and efforts will be made to raise the amount required immediately.

Mr. Justice Ramsay, of the Court of Queen's Bench, Montreal, caused a sensation on discharging the grand jury by taking the unusual course of reprimanding them for having, according to custom, paid an official visit to Longue Pointe Lunatic Asylum.

Sir Ambrose Shea, who arrived at Halifax on Friday, from St. John's, Newfoundland, proceeds direct to Washington to confer with the United States Government respecting the Fishery treaty. The proposals to be submitted by him cannot at present be made known.

Charles Hoare, a middle-aged banker of London, is charged with contempt of court in secretly corresponding with Blanche Sumner, a ward in Chancery. A London special says, notwithstanding Mr. Hoare is a married man, Miss Sumner has been living with him for some time back as his wife. Lady Cholmondely is also in trouble for being the medium of correspondence between the parties.

"SEA OF MOUNTAINS."

The Remarkable Topography of Our Magnificent Country.

Hardikanute writing to the Montreal Herald, says: Hon. Edward Blake generally gets the credit for having described this Province as a "sea of mountains," although in using such a designation the gentleman was only quoting from Milton and Cheadle's most interesting account of their journey across the continent,—using the expression, however, in an evil sense which those authors obviously never intended. In truth, it is a form of speech which any person would almost instinctively apply, on first visiting the mountain region of British Columbia. The appropriateness of the metaphor is enhanced, too by the fact that

THE MOUNTAIN WAVES OF THIS SEA—

Ranging from 2000 up to 7000 feet in height above sea level—are for the most part like storm-waves of a humble and restless class, topped, throughout the year, with a foam-like crest of snowy white. These snow-white crests, when exposed to the sunlight, glow like frosted silver, and have the effect of lending a lightness and cheeriness to what would otherwise be the somewhat gloomy, although unquestionably grand, aspect of the most prevalent scenery. The aspect of the coast, both of islands and mainland, closely indented by the deep, dark fords, gashed into the frowning mountains, especially northwards from the mouth of Burrard Inlet, has, perhaps in a still more marked degree, the character of gloomy grandeur. For these mountains up to the snow line, are all densely clad with forests exhibiting only the dark colors of the pine, cedar, cypress and other species of the Conifera order.

Still, British Columbia, taking it in all, is far from being "a mountain sea," or "sea of Mountains." It has become customary for the uninformed, and even among many who ought to know better, to say that this Province can never be an agricultural country. Who has not heard the same thing said, at times, of every other Province of the Dominion? Certainly I have. These growlers malign the country. A large proportion of it is, everything considered,

MOST ADMIRABLY ADAPTED TO AGRICULTURE.

Take, for instance, both banks of the Fraser river, from its mouth up to the canons of the Cascade mountains. Take again the large section of country between the Fraser and the boundary line—the 49th parallel. There is no better agricultural land in the Dominion. It is strange, but true, that this land is notably superior to that of the adjacent Washington Territory,—a fact which I have often heard the people of that territory express with wonder. East of the Cascades and extending away down to the same boundary line, there is a large belt of excellent tillage land immediately available. There is much more which can be made available by irrigation; for there is but slight rain fall there; and irrigation is, for the most part, really less expensive than clearing off the heavily timbered woodland. Again, east and north of the Cascades, there are vast expanses of plain country, growing bunch grass luxuriantly and admirably adapted for stock raising. There are, besides, numerous mountain valleys of prime cultivable land.

Auction Sale

OF VALUABLE VICTORIA CITY

Building Lots

Six Lots on the Fernwood estate, fronting on Fort street and the adjoining street, and Five Lots in James Bay, between Simcoe and Niagara streets.

Saturday Evening next, April 4

COMMENCING AT 7:30 SHARP.

FIVE LOTS IN JAMES BAY,

Sub-division of the west half of lot 20, between Simcoe and Niagara streets, comprise Lots 11, 17, 19, 21 and 24, these building sites are in a very favorable part of the James Bay portion of the City. There are many handsome residences in the immediate vicinity, and on the lots already sold upon the plan, there are built or in course of erection, very neat dwelling houses. The lots are entirely free from rock or stumps, are high and dry with splendid soil which offer peculiar advantages to buyers who wish to devote a portion of the land for fruit or flower gardens, while the easy distance, by good graded streets and sidewalks from the busy center of the city, makes this part a very desirable one for residences.

—ALSO—

Six Splendid Building Lots

ON THE FERNWOOD ESTATE,

Fronting on Fort street and adjoining streets, which faces the residence and charming grounds of Col. C. E. Dupont, and are known on the plan as Lots 5, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 16. Upon the lots already sold on this plan there have been built, or in course of erection, two of the handsomest houses in the city, and it is understood that the owners of the other lots contemplate building fine residences this summer.

This locality, it is needless to say, is for residential purposes, one of the very best in Victoria. The Cadboro Bay road being one of the most popular drives with our citizens, and many of the best residences are situated around this part. The contemplated route of the Victoria Street Railway, past these lots should make them very desirable to those who wish to have speedy access to the business portion of the city, while to those whom a short and pleasant walk is a desideratum in their daily life, the lots to be sold present every advantage in that respect.

The terms of the sale, which will be particularly favorable, will be announced at the sale.

Plans of the properties will be on view at the rooms of the auctioneers.

Remember Saturday evening next, at 7:30, and also that every lot will be sold to the highest bidder.

—An item last night stated that the name of "The Colonist" had been adopted by a city hotel. The organ, bearing that name, seems to have taken offence, and says it is information which concerns people of "a certain disreputable class." This journal did not intend to make any insinuation against the repute of The Colonist as that sheet seems to imagine.

THE BOSS SONG OF THE MAHDI.

Yes, I am the boss o' the sandy Soudan,
And I hardly think a more competent man
Could be found between Tennessee and Japan,
To bounce the bold British invader.

I'm a twelve-fingered, bow-legged son of a gun;
I'm a prophet from 'way back—a child of the sun;
I'm a dandy, a lol-lah, a darlin', a hun'—
I'm a red-handed ripper and raider.

My fo'lowers number two millions or more,
And every man of them is equal to four;
They're not much for style, but they're dandies for gore—
They're bad men from Keshr-el-Wadir.

El Gordon I've captured, I'm happy to state;
El Stewart has met his well-merited fate;
I'll butcher El Wolseley, if he'll only wait,
And Queen Vic. will think luck has betrayed her.

So strike, shirtless sons of the shimmering sand,
One more blow for your prophet (that's me, understand)
Disembowel the insolent infidel band!
Vic' set the infernal invader!

Thomson, of Brucefield, to Vancouver City, British Columbia, and that he intended to go in the beginning of April to his new field.

LOST ON A MOUNTAIN.

Two Ladies go Prospecting and Lose the Trail.

On a pleasant afternoon last week, two ladies, accompanied by a child and three dogs, ascended Prospect Lake Mountain, near Stevenson's Hotel, to get a view of the beautiful panorama of hill and dale, sombre woods and shimmering water stretches, that lie all around that romantic locality, in promiscuous confusion. After drinking in the full beauty of the scene and inhaling the "caller" air, they started to return, but had not proceeded far when it suddenly dawned upon them that they had lost their reckoning, and were wandering they knew not whither. The ladies did not scream. Ladies never do scream under such circumstances, for there is no one to hear them. Neither did they cry, for there was no hard heart to melt; nor even look disconsolate, for there was no one to pity their distress. They simply sat down on the velvet cushion of a moss-covered boulder and discussed the latest Victoria fashions. In the meantime, fries is at the hotel, alarmed at their long absence, were out in force searching the woods, and with the aid of horn-blowing and "hallooing" succeeded after a time in recovering the absent ones. When found the ladies were sitting back to back, whether to keep themselves warm or because they had differed on the subject under discussion deponent saith not; but he vouches for the truth of the statement that the faithful dogs had securely covered the sleeping child with dry leaves and twigs, as the birds covered the "babes of the woods," told about in the true story of "Jack the Giant Killer."

A POWERFUL BATTERY.

James McLean, a lineman of the Toronto electric light company, when about to make some repairs to a broken wire, grasped the end of it, having been told that the current was turned off. The result was terrible. McLean was instantly twisted like a corkscrew and writhing in agony he fell on the ground, moaning, "I'm dying, George." His companion tried to drag him off but without avail, and as a last resort, and at a risk to his own life, seized the wire and with a desperate effort pulled it out of the prostrate man's hands, thereby saving him from death. McLean was rendered unconscious by the shock and his hands were badly burned. Next day he was able to be about but still feels "all turned round" and will not be able to resume work for a while. The cause of his suffering is explained by the fact that after the current had been turned off, it was unwittingly thrown on again by a man in the works he had left to assist in repairing the damage. Had the full current been on at the time, his death would have been instantaneous.

GOOD FRIDAY.

Generally Observed as a Holiday—Church—Sports.

To-day, being Good Friday, was generally observed as a holiday. On the principal streets the stores and business houses were closed. The foundries and factories ceased operations and the employees devoted themselves to enjoying the day. Carriages and vehicles were in great demand by those who seem at liberty to enjoy some of the delightful drives for which this locality is famous.

Services were held in the Episcopal and Catholic churches at which impressive addresses suitable to the occasion were delivered to large audiences. Some of the churches were handsomely decorated for the Easter services.

COUNTY COURT.

[Before Sir M. B. Begbie, C. J.]

THURSDAY, April 2d, 1885.

Cook vs. Whiting.—Action to recover $683 claimed to be due the plaintiff. Mr. Davie (Davie & Wilson) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Drake for the defendant. Mr. Cook, a ship carpenter, tendered to perform certain work to the ship Maggie E. Seed, for Capt. Whiting, for the sum of $625. The work was to be performed in twelve working days, and in default agreed to pay a forfeit per day of four-pence per ton of the ship's registered tonnage. The work was not completed within the specified time, and payment was refused. The amount due under the forfeit clause would amount to over $2000, or over three times the amount of the contract price.

Mr. Davie, for the plaintiff, claimed that the delay was the fault of Capt. Whiting, who interfered with the progress of the work. The sum sued for was the contract price and extras.

Mr. Drake, for the defendant, claimed that the delay was the fault of the contractor, and owing to the delay the Captain had lost a charter. The amount of forfeit was not claimed, but a counter claim was put in.

The case occupied the Court most of the day. The jury brought in a verdict allowing the defendant $350 upon his counter claim, and the plaintiff his full account less a small admitted off-set. The difference, $300, was awarded to the plaintiff.

The Dominion Government's Bill.

The Montreal Times says: It has been observed that the Government's proposed cure for Chinese immigration is not likely to satisfy the British Columbians. It is only proposed to impose a poll tax on all Chinamen entering the Dominion; and to limit the number of "uneducated" Chinese laborers coming on each vessel. Who is to discharge the functions of an educational examiner—a Canadian or a Chinaman—is not explained. Does "education" mean Chinese or British? For the purposes professed to be sought the bill is a sham.

Prospective Soup.

A live turtle, which would weigh about 200 pounds, arrived by steamer Queen of the Pacific, for the Driard House. It was caught somewhere on the south coast, where such gay and festive creatures belong. The guests of the house are expecting a great treat.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

(THE TIMES wishes it to be distinctly understood that it is in no way responsible for, and does not necessarily agree with its correspondents.)

"A Plain Man" Speaks.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—I am only a very plain man; I am afraid to appear in print lest I should stir up some antagonism that would force one out of my depth, and so nullify what good effect my plain statements might have had. When editors, parsons, and other auxiliary aids are all bent one way, and seem determined to over-come all impediments to achieve a thing, it requires some boldness (especially single handed) to hint at any of the questionable means that may be employed by those same way farers. I notice one thing, that the Blue Ribbon movement has degenerated into a cheap concert hall, where the young of both sexes are to be found oftener than they are at church. I notice also that the leading advocates, the pillars of the structure, have a keen scent for the dollar, even to the invoking of legislative action to close all places of common resort except their own; but as the proverb has it, "It is a poor sham that has no gold at the bottom." That there are a few gigantic shams even here, is a sad truth; but the most overshadowing sham of all is the Blue Ribbon movement. Started in the first place by a few itinerant hawkers of cheap balderdash, a few kindred spirits have taken hold of it, and behold! a few brands plucked from the burning, which society would not have missed even if we had had an auto-da-fe. All this, with the beat of drum and the tinkling of cymbals, as if some great national victory had been won. Certainly these same kindred spirits have an inherent right to snatch all the brands possible, even if they burn their own fingers, but I fail to see what right they have to coerce me or any other person into their views, particularly when we are anything but brands. Would it not be better for these men to keep their own ground, they have chosen it, besides rearing a big fence between us whereon is placarded the most opprobious terms against their neighbors. If they prefer the aqueous tarnip, the sodden "Murphy," the dizzieing atmosphere, and swampy path, let them have all these, it is their panishment; but don't let them speak through the fence with envious railing because we have the faculty to enjoy and the disposition to appreciate the good things that have been given to us.

They seem to be acting on that thumb-screw spirit of centuries ago, and which it is a pity to see so rampant in this same Canada. Let us hope that bye and bye we shall have outgrown the extreme notions incident to youth, and be able to legislate wisely without tampering to the outrageous views of any party, sect or section.

It is a fact to be lamented that many movements that owe their inauguration to the purest principles of philanthropy, after a while are only the synonym for selfishness and all uncharitableness. Such can truly be said of the temperance movement in British North America. It has degenerated, till now it is a nondescript monstrosity, by which religion and bigotry, extreme partyism and fanaticism are made use of to carry out measures which are a disgrace to the policy of any country in the world.

A PLAIN MAN.

Advertising Rates.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—Observing in this mornings Colonist a statement that that paper's rates of advertising will be found on it first page, I for one know that those rates do not always govern the amount paid for such service, notwithstanding the Colonist's cry of "coke" for a length of time.

ONE WHO HAS PAID THEM.

TWO INDUSTRIES

That will Pay and should be Embarked in by our Citizens.

A well informed correspondent of the Montreal Herald, elsewhere quoted, writes from this city to that journal as follows: Ship timber more abundant and of better quality I have never seen anywhere; and I am enabled to speak with confidence in the matter. The wood of the Douglas pine—the most prevalent tree that grows here—compares, in this respect, not unfavorably with the celebrated English oak. There is another all but untried resource of the soil of the country which cannot fail to produce, at no distant day, a large traffic with the Eastern Prairie Provinces, British Columbia is unquestionably going to be the greatest and most successful fruit growing country in the whole Dominion of Canada. What has already been done affords ample proofs of this; and the experiments have been made by those who are, for the most part, apprentices at fruit culture. Apples, pears, plums and cherries produce enormously. Quinces, peaches and apricots can be successfully cultivated. Equally certain and easy is it to grow the finest crops of the smaller fruits—gooseberries, currants, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, of every variety. As it is about certain that the Prairie Provinces can never be successful fruit growers, here is, in itself, what promises to be an important source of traffic between them and British Columbia.

We reached the zareba at ten o'clock. There we reconnoitered from balloon. The enemy was reported visible in small numbers. The weather is fairly cool, and only a few men fell out of the ranks for water. We continued to advance in the afternoon until three o'clock, the mounted infantry and Bengal cavalry scouting. At three o'clock we occupied Tresclah hill, eastward of Tamai. The enemy appears to have retired, but no precautions against an attack will be neglected."

General Graham has formed a zareba three miles from Tamai. The British cavalry hovered within three-quarters of a mile of Tamai without opposition.

Graham occupied with his forces all the heights above Tamai last evening. During last night the rebels fired into the zareba and some of their shots took effect. One soldier was killed outright and two others were wounded. Early this morning Gen. Graham advanced to Tamai, and at 7 o'clock took possession of the springs. Another dispatch reads: Hill above Tamai, 7 a. m.—The Guards, Bengalese troops, marines, Berkshire regiment and Sikhs will occupy Tamai on Monday. The remainder of the forces will follow when a water supply has been secured. A dispatch from Gen. Graham is as follows: Tesclahe Hill, 6:30 a.m.—Hills around the zareba occupied last night by a chain of pickets, supported by a strong body of troops.

A Fight Progressing.

LONDON, April 3.—A special dispatch received from Suakim says Gen. Graham commenced the advance on Tamaieb this morning. He had not proceeded far before he found the enemy strongly entrenched, just beyond Tamai. General Graham immediately attacked the Arabs' position, and the battle is now going on.

American Interests.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—In answer to a telegram sent last night by Secretary Whitney, to the president of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., at New York, relative to the number of men the company's vessel can take to Aspinwall without delay, the following reply was received this morning: We can carry two hundred men in the City of Para to-morrow at noon, and six hundred in Acapulco next Monday. Secretary Whitney replied: We will ship two hundred men by your steamer to-morrow without tents and camp equipage. The Tennessee, with Admiral Jouwett, will leave New Orleans probably to-day, with extra complement of marines for Aspinwall. This will place 2 ships and between 400 and 500 available men at Aspinwall for land service. As to Monday's steamer, will communicate hereafter. Men will be taken from Brooklyn navy yard. In reply to a telegram to Commander Kane, of the Galena, the following was received to-day: Transit is closed; steamship property safe and in my possession, also railroad property at the north end of the island. It is advisable to send another vessel. When it was learned in the Navy Department this morning that the secretary had determined to protect American interests at the Isthmus by force, there was considerable excitement among naval officers on duty. A number of them immediately volunteered their services to go to Aspinwall. The selection of officers, however, has been left to the board of detail, which convened at 11:30 o'clock. It is understood Major Charles Haywood, of the marine corps, who is in charge of marine barracks at Brooklyn, will have immediate command of marines. Naval officers of rank, however, will probably be detailed to command the expedition.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., April 2.—A dispatch was received from Secretary Whitney to-day ordering 90 marines to Brooklyn for Panama. They left by the first train.

The Holy See.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The question of diplomatic relations between the Holy See and England, the United States and the English speaking countries generally is likely to be solved before long in the appointment of Monsignor De Rende, now papal nuncio at Paris, to a high post at the Propaganda, with the title of "Cardinal Protector of English speaking Catholics."

Central American Difficulty.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The Secretary of the Navy has received applications from nearly all naval officers who are availably located to be sent to Aspinwall. He received the following dispatch this morning from Commander Kane of Galena: "I hold two of the most prominent insurgents, who assisted in firing Aspinwall. I do not think it safe to deliver them to the Columbian authorities, who would permit their escape." Admiral Jonette telegraphs from New Orleans that he left that city with the Tennesee this morning for Aspinwall.

Gen. Grant's Condition.

NEW YORK, April 3.—At 10.30 a. m. this bulletin was issued: Grant was quite refreshed by his long sleeps. He has taken nourishment twice since last bulletin, and is now preparing for a bath in bed. His pulse is good and the good condition of six o'clock continues. At 10.45 ex-Senator Chaffee and Councillor Perrington left the house. They reported the General easy. Mr. Chaffee said the improvement must be regarded as due to the patient's great constitution and indomitable pluck, but that the improvement could not be permanent.

NEW YORK, April 3.—At 1.45 it was believed that General Grant was not so strong as he was this morning, and it is feared he may be considerably worse. A consultation of doctors will be held. Dr. Shrady has just arrived.

Canadian Dispatches.

York Rangers Ordered Out.

TORONTO, April 2.—A dispatch reached here from Colonel O'Brien to-day ordering the York Rangers to hold themselves in readiness to leave this afternoon. Bulletins were immediately issued from the newspaper offices and the greatest excitement prevails. Crowds are on the way to the Queen's wharf, where the Rangers will embark and be joined by the Simcoe Foresters contingent. They go by the Canadian Pacific.

Norquay's Opinion.

WINNIPEG, April 2.—In an interview to-night Premier Norquay explains that the Indian tribes are being led into rebellion by half-breeds through Riel's influence, but as they are all short of supplies they will soon yield to a military force now being concentrated in the field. The trouble will soon be surpressed, "I am assured," he said "that Riel has not more than 500 half-breeds under arms, who can easely be overpowered."

OTTAWA, April 3.—The Government has ordered 10,000 Martini-Henry rifles and 3,000,000 rounds of cartridges for the troops.

THE KIDNAPPING CASE.

The Alleged Case Cleared up Satisfactorily.

An account was lately published of a San Francisco detective finding a child near Whatcom. The Portland Standard gives the following explanation:

"Among the passengers on the steamship for San Francisco last night was M. J. Phillips, a San Francisco detective, who had in charge a three-year old child named James Mitchell, son of a San Francisco drummer, whom he was taking home. The child was given over to the care of Mrs. Kate Johnson, and about one month ago Mrs. Johnson and her husband moved to British Columbia to locate. They quietly left the city, taking the child with them. The detective was put on the track of the fugitives and traced them to their new habitation, which is about five miles from Sehome, on the New Westminster road. Mr. Phillips had some trouble in persuading the woman to relinquish the child, but after showing his papers she concluded to give him up. Mrs. Johnson's notion for keeping the child was she had none of her own, and had become attached to it. The little fellow is hardly old enough to realize the situation he is in."

them they were preparing for one more raid, which they had agreed should be their last.

"That's what we said about every one, though," said Corbett, "after September 1. The fact is, we did a good deal better than we expected, and every time we would get a good sum we would say, 'Now we will quit,' but before we got packed up we would agree to try it just once more. Now look at us. If we had only choked ourselves off we would have been in shape now for fun."

The detectives who had worked up a clear case against the boys, learned from them the place where they hid their plunder, and after a careful search in the mountains unearthed about $4,000 in gold and several hundred dollars in bills. Besides this there was much valuable jewelry, and the boys had a good deal of currency on their persons. Before leaving here the detectives got a long story out of their prisoners, who regard themselves as very clever thieves. Having made up their minds that they will have to serve out a long sentence, and that nothing will avail them as a defense, they are making merry over a bad job.

"The way of it was just this," observed Corbett. "My partner here and I met in San Francisco last May, and we agreed on this little enterprise. We saw by the papers that stages were being held up in all parts of the State, and we concluded to try it. The first one we tackled was down in the mountains, a hundred miles south of here, and we got nothing but a little silver from the driver—and some good advice. He says: 'See here, you fellers. You're green at the business, and I know it. When you order up a stage just you remember also to call for 'em to throw off the box. The box is the thing that's got the dust in. I don't happen to have any just now, but that's what you're after.' We tried it next time on the Oroville line, but it so happened that that driver didn't have any box, and we had to stand the passengers up.

"We made a great reputation that time. In fact, that is what we were trying to do everywhere. The papers got it all in about our being courteous and gallant. No one ever tried harder in that line than we did. Down near Mendocino once, when a big fellow hit me across the mouth with a walking-stick as big as my wrist, I didn't say anything. We simply robbed him a little more thoroughly, taking his coat, vest and hat. I've got them on now. After we got our hand in we found things worked a good deal better. We got so we could do up a stage in four minutes from the first yell, and if they'd let us alone we would have lowered that record a little. There's an awful sight for a beginner to learn in the business. It makes me mad to think that some butcher will be agoing over this route next summer, making bad breaks. What we intended to do was to get away from here this week and go East for the winter. Then next summer we intended to come back again, unless we struck something."

Dwyer assented to all that was said, observing that his luck had always been bad. When his partner ceased talking he said: "There is something in the air of California that makes a travelling man a chump. It's just as my partner says. You have got an awful sight to learn. I am thinking some of writing a book on the staging business. I could give some of these fellows points. There ought to be some authority which the young might use as a guide. All the old road agents are gone, and the only way a new comer can get along is to learn by experience. Now, as it will be a good while before I have any use for stage-coaches again. I will give you a few precepts.

"In the first place never appear to be in a hurry—that is, in a nervous hurry. Just keep bustling about as though it was a very disagreeable duty that must be attended to. Second—Never get scared at all. There is no danger. Just keep your weapon handy and don't take your eye off your victims. Third—Remember that the big haul is generally in the treasure-box or the mail sack, and that neither the driver or the passengers care for either of them. They will not make themselves obnoxious about them, and you may depend upon it, if you work it right. Fourth—Don't be too hoggish in going through the passengers themselves. Just take what comes handy and no more. This is a particularly wise rule to follow when you have a heavy treasure-box and a fat mail bag. If you exasperate a passenger he may fight. If you simply relieve him of what comes handy, and don't appear as if you were in very needy circumstances yourselves, or as if you wanted to bankrupt him, you will gain his admiration and gratitude. With—If there are ladies aboard assure them the first thing that they will not be disturbed. Make them stand up, and watch them, of course, for they are treacherous; but when you come to them in the line just say that you never rob the fair sex, and hand them back their things. You'll make it up in the long run. Look out for yourself every minute you are at the job. Some of the most harmless-looking men I ever saw had the hardest and heaviest fists. One fellow down here on the big tree road fooled me he was consumptive, and five minutes afterward, when he hit me back of the ear, I thought a tree had fallen on me. Seventh—Pay no attention to the driver. He's used to it, and as long as no one offers to shoot, he doesn't worry.

"I have met some very sociable drivers in my day that I would like to describe, but I will not bother about them now. The idea conveyed in all these precepts is to do the work without friction and make no enemies. The box and the bag being heavy, you can afford to be easy on the passengers. If they do not lose much and are well treated, they are rather proud of the experience, and they never tire of reciting the details. This makes them your friends, that is, you've got no howling, wild-eyed avengers on your trail except the Wells-Fargo and United States sharps, and you can dodge them after you're used to it. I'll bet you the whole pile I've made this summer that if I knew a month ago what I know now, no Wells-Fargo man could ever have run me down."

"That's all true, every word of it," broke in Corbett. "We learned a good deal one day coming over the mountains. We had been off for a little recreation, and coming back here in the stage three big fellows with shotguns stopped us. My partner and I were on the front seat on the inside, and as soon as we discovered what was up we were very anxious to see how they did the work. Well, they were slick ones. We stood up in a row with the other passengers, and when one of them came along to me I said: 'I'm a member of the profession.' I whispered it gently, so the others wouldn't hear me, and he looked at me sharp like, and says loud, so all could hear him: 'Is that so? We never rob preachers.' And he handed me back the little roll of bills which he had taken from me. Well, I rather admired the chap for his geniality, but it cut me up dreadfully to be called a preacher. It was all right, though. There's where we learned a good deal of what we know now."

The detectives have gone to San Francisco with the recovered treasure. The prisoners will plead guilty.
